ARE WE REBELLIOUS?

An Eastern Journal Discusses British Columbia's Threats.

The Ottawa Free Press is generally pretty well informed on political affairs. Referring to the departure for home of Mr. Reid, M. P. for Cariboo, who arrived in Victoria about a week ago, the Free Press says the pretence for his early departure was that he did not care to support the Franchise bill any longer. To a representative of THE TIMES, Mr. Reid stated on his arrival in Victoria that urgent private business called him home, and when it is borne in mind that he was six months away from business, it will be admitted that his reason for returning before the close of the session is more worthy of credence than that advanced by the Ottawa journal. But our contemporary says: "He had always been a steadfast supporter of the government, but before his departure he received a telegram from his leading constituents telling him that he was at perfect liberty to oppose the government if they did not immediately modify the obnoxious Dominion timber limit regulations. Mr. Reid, therefore, left for home on account of the threatening aspect of affairs in this province. British Columbians here are receiving telegrams of an alarming nature from that province.

Mr. Blake will to-morrow formally ask the rumors of dissatisfaction in British Columbia on account of the Dominion timber limit regulations and if it has taken steps to remove that dissatisfaction by the modification of those regulations.

This morning Mr. Gordon, M.P., was approached by an inquisitive liberal member of parliament who desired to know what truth there was in the rumors coming from the Pacific province.

"It would be wise for our people" said Mr. Gordon, M.P., "not to take extreme steps, but to present their grievances formally, and then they will be redressed."

"But what were you British Columbians doing" asked the Liberal M. P., "when these obnoxious timber regulations were passed. You were here at the time?"

"Oh! we were not consulted" replied Mr. Gordon.

"Not consulted," cried the liberal M.P., with astonishment. "Why, what kind of government supporters are you, that the government does not consult your people on matters concerning your own province?"

The Franchise Bill

Considerable doubt existed as to whether the provisions of the franchise bill were applicable to this province or not. During a recent session of the House the premier removed the uncertainty by proposing an amendment to his previous amendment.

Sir John Macdonald said that his amendment now under discussion proposed that British Columbia should not be exempt from the operation of the bill. His attention had been called to a promise made by him during the debate that British Columbia as well as Manitoba and the territories should be exempted. After he made that promise he had a conversation with the British Columbian members and decided that the clause should apply to those provinces as they wished it. Therefore he brought in the amendment as framed. Under the circumstances, however, as his first promise was given he moved in amendment to his own amendment that British Columbia be added to the provinces exempted from the operation of the Indian clause. (Opposition jeers and ironical cheers and laughter.)

Mr. Mills drew the attention of the House to a serious defect in the clause as proposed by Sir John, which referred only to Indians on reserves. If an Indian leaves his reserve, and accumulates property, he is not granted the privilege of voting under the new bill; but if all the Indians on any reserve leave and settle elsewhere, the value of the reserve may be considered, and if it is sufficient, every one of such Indians will be entitled to vote. He next read from the premier's reports and speeches, which contradicted one another as to the intelligence of the Indians, which were Sir John's bases for their enfranchisement of the Indians. He was prepared to prove that four-fifths of the whole Indian population cannot read or write, and those were the people whom it was proposed to enfranchise.

Mr. Blake took occasion to illustrate the untenable ground of the ministerialists that the debate was being unnecessarily protracted. At the outset of the discussion days ago, he said, Sir John proposed to enfranchise all the tribal Indians in Canada, including British Columbia. As the debate progressed the Premier promised to exempt the Indians of British Columbia, as well as Manitoba, Keewatin and the Northwest territories from the operation of the bill; then two days ago he introduced an amendment which did not exempt British Columbian Indians from operation of the bill, but now he introduces another amendment which does exclude British Columbia Indians from being given ballots under this clause (Liberal cheers.) This was the Premier's mind at the present moment, but he might yet change it.

Revolting Barbarities.

Latest advices from Battleford report the return of scouts from the west, who confirm the former report of the brutal murder of eight innocent persons at Frog Lake. They found the body of Mrs. Gowanlock in a well with her breast cut out, also Policeman Gowanlock cut open and his heart stuck upon a stake near him. They also report the buildings at Fort Pitt and Frog Lake burned. They say that Mrs. Gowanlock and Mrs. Delaney were captured by Big Bear's band at Frog Lake, when Indian Agent Quinn, Rev. Fathers Fafard and Marchand, Willis Craft, L. Gouin, W. Gilchrist, Geo. Low and brothers were killed and the place burned. This is the first definite information as to the fate of the unfortunate victims of the Indians, though it was believed the two ladies must have died from the brutal treatment received at the hands of their lustful captors. News has been received indirectly that Mrs. Delaney was traded to a half-breed for a horse, and later that after inhuman treatment she had been killed and mutilated by the squaws, which reports were again contradicted. Mrs. Delaney's body not being found gives hope that she is still alive, and may be rescued by the troops of Gen. Strange, who is on the trail of Big Bear and his murderous band.

ENGLAND'S CRISIS.

LONDON, June 9.—It is understood that the Conservatives will form a new cabinet and undertake the administration of the government if requested to do so by the Queen. The following is a forecast of a portion of the new cabinet: The Marquis of Salisbury, Prime Minister; Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the Exchequer and leader in the House of Commons; Sir Stafford Northcote, who will go the House of Lords, Lord President of the Council; Lord Randolph Churchill, Secretary of State for India, and Colonel Frederick A. Stanley, Secretary of State for War.

The ministerial circle takes the defeat with equanimity. It is stated that the cabinet, in view of the tendency to disruption and internal discord, were willing to take advantage of the chance to resign.

The crisis postpones indefinitely a settlement with Russia. The Conservatives will adopt Earl Granville's frontier convention, but will insist upon stringent guarantees against further Russian advance.

In the absence of the desire of the Queen that a Conservative government be formed, that party will leave the present ministers to untangle their own difficulties.

It is rumored that Gladstone intends to entirely abandon political life.

Mr. Gladstone went to Balmoral last night to place his resignation in the Queen's hands.

The result of the Cabinet council yesterday was a unanimous decision affirming the necessity for resignation by the entire ministry. Earl Salisbury has been in conference with Sir Stafford Northcote. It is expected that the surviving members of the last Disraeli Cabinet will hold a meeting this afternoon to consider the situation and their own responsibility in the premises.

CHURCHILL NOT WANTED.

Special to THE TIMES.

LONDON, June 10.—The chief difficulty to be encountered by the Conservatives on their discussion regarding the formation of a ministry, says the Pall Mall Gazette, is the problem of what to do with Lord Randolph Churchill. He claims to have done much in the work of destroying the Liberal government and demands his share of the spoils. It is apparent that the older Tories regard him as troublesome and somewhat dangerous to have around in the national councils of the realm. The Gazette intimates that a polite effort will be made to get rid of him. If the Conservatives form a government he will, it is understood, be requested to go to Ireland, if not to succeed Earl Spencer as Lord Lieutenant, then as Chief Secretary. The sort of talk which is already being applied to the young man is something like this: "You certainly prefer duty to mere ambition, therefore you should adopt this difficult and dangerous post. Dare you accept it? If you accept, then, whether you succeed or fail, you will at least prove that you possess the great qualities of intrepidity and self sacrifice, which are amongst the greatest gifts possessed by popular statesmen." Lord Randolph is very susceptible to flattery and he might prove a great Irish governor.

Gladstone Still in London.

Special to THE TIMES.

LONDON, June 10.—Mr. Gladstone has not yet left for Balmoral, to place his resignation of the cabinet in the hands of the Queen, as stated in the Standard this morning. He is still in London. Earl Spencer is in Dublin, having left London after the cabinet meeting yesterday.

LONDON, June 10.—The Standard in an editorial this morning says the duty of the Conservatives is clear. We trust they will not hesitate, though statesmen have seldom been faced with so uninviting a task.

The Proposed Cabinet must be Distrusted.

Special to THE TIMES.

PARIS, June 10.—The Republique Francais, speaking of the resignation of the Gladstone cabinet says: "Europe must distrust a ministry where the wisdom of Sir Stafford Northcote can be nullied by the passionate imprudence of Earl Salisbury and the petulance of Lord Randolph Churchill, when foreign questions demand so much coolness and tact."

Stephens, accompanied by an escort and many citizens, left Atlanta for Crawfordsville, where the body, which had been removed from the vault in this city, will laid in its permanent resting place in Liberty Hall. The Lauderdale Peerage.

Special to THE TIMES.

LONDON, June 10.—The committee of the House of Lords to-day began the consideration of the claim of Mary MacLeod Maitland to the Lauderdale peerage. Maj. Maitland in his petition to the Lords says he is a poor, the fourth son of the sixth Earl of Lauderdale, who it is alleged married Mary Macleod in New York in 1772. Two days before her death Mary MacLeod had borne three sons to this fourth son of the sixth Earl. It is contended by the petitioner, Maj. Maitland, that this marriage constituted the offspring of Sir James Maitland, the descendant of the sixth son of the sixth Earl of Lauderdale, contests the claim of Major Maitland in the peerage. U. S. Minister Phelps, U. S. Senator Edmunds and Messrs. Fowler, Stephens, Nash, and Clarence Cary will give his many concerning the law of marriage, as it existed in the American colonies in 1772.

The Canadian Pacific Railway in British Columbia.

The joint printing committee of the Senate and Commons has recommended the printing of returns ordered for any information in the possession of the department as to the character of the work done near Lytton, B. C., on the Canadian Pacific railway on that portion of the road, for which Mr. Hugh J. Keefer had a sub-contract, and which was under the inspection of his brother, Mr. George Keefer, government engineer; also, copies of any statements as to the character of the material allowed as rock or as other than earth, in this part. Also returns ordered for reports, plans, and other information in the possession of the department in reference to the work on the Canadian Pacific railway at or near Maple Ridge; for all reports and information in the possession of the department as to the condition of the work on the government sections of the Canadian Pacific railway, and as to the extent of work remaining to be done before the completion of the contract; also, for all correspondence with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company as to the taking over by them of these sections of the railway; also for a statement of the names, salaries and period of service in that region, of the government engineers who have been employed on the government sections in British Columbia of the Canadian Pacific railway, with dates at which any of them were relieved, a statement of the cause of their removal, and of their present occupation, if any, under the government.

The Troublesome Indians Subsiding

Recent advices from Battleford, and other Northwest points indicate quietness and peace being restored. Scouts are scouring the country looking for Big Bear. They report the Cree Indians having returned to their reserves. The Stonies are also settling down. A Stoney Indian accused of murder has been captured. Large quantities of stolen goods and stock have been recovered. Scouts have been unable to find Big Bear's location. There is much doubt as to where he has gone or what his intentions are. General Strange, now supposed to be near Fort Pitt, will likely follow up Big Bear's trail. Middleton has issued a proclamation requesting soldiers to volunteer for the new government corps to be kept in the country. Two companies of the Midland Battalion have gone on to Battleford from Clarke's Crossing. The balance of the Ninth battalion, Quebec, has been ordered to Edmonton. Middleton will follow Big Bear unless he surrenders. In his first note to Poundmaker, when he asked upon what terms he would be allowed to surrender, Middleton told him if he did not come in at once he would blow him to Hades.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

While the columns of THE TIMES are open for the discussion of questions of public interest, to correspondents, it must be understood that it does not necessarily endorse, nor coincide with, the sentiments expressed by writers in this column.

No Man can Comply and Live.

To the Editor of THE TIMES:

SIR—I took up a claim within the railroad belt last year, at the suggestion of the government guide, and quite expected it was to be as he said. He contended lands under the Dominion Act, which provides that any one living on and cultivating land for three years can, at the expiration of that time, receive a patent for the same. Now, after reading the comments upon the Dominion Lands Act, it seems to me that I have been misled. Can you give to myself and others, in a similar position, information as to whether the said regulations are to apply to present settlers? If so, we might close out, as no man can comply and live.

Langley Prairie, June 3rd, 1885.

Dominion Lands Regulations.

To the Editor of THE TIMES:

SIR—Last year, relying upon the information contained in a public notice, dated April 10th, 1885, signed by the Dominion Government Agent, I was induced to come to this province and settle upon a quarter section in Township B, New Westminster district, expecting to take up the land in accordance with the provisions of the "Dominion Lands Act" as quoted in the said notice, and confirmed by the answer received to my application. I also induced two others to take up neighboring lots, and have been sending home to the "old country" for friends to come and do the same. Now, what is our position? I have already spent $400; have put seven months hard labor into the land, and have a comfortable house in course of erection, wherein to receive my family on their arrival from England. My friends have also been working on their respective lots and expect their families in due course. The regulations affecting this land, as notified in your paper, causes us great concern. If they are to be applied to us and others who took up land at the same time. We feel that we shall be the victims of a gross breach of faith. Rather than pay the proposed price of $2.50 per acre we intend crossing over to the American side. As regards the new homestead regulations our experience convinces us that it is impossible to conform to them. Pending a settlement of the question we have notified those at home to stay there. Trusting that truth and justice will, even at the eleventh hour, prevail.

AN OLD COUNTRY MAN.

POLICE COURT.

(Before Edwin Johnson, Esq., S. M.)

Johnny, a west coast Indian, pleaded guilty to being drunk, and was fined $5 or one week.

Henry Brown, assaulting special officer Farrell, when in the discharge of his duty, with the intent to prevent the apprehension of himself and another party. The officer was called upon by the watchman of the Elisa Anderson to investigate a robbery that had been committed on that boat, and about midnight on Johnson street met prisoner and one or two others. In attempting to arrest them he was assaulted, and struck on the mouth and head, his stick wrenched from his hand and threats made that he would be thrown over the railing. The officer then covered his assailant with his revolver, and compelled him to throw down the stick. Officer Lindsay, arriving, the other assailants made off and Brown was arrested and taken to the gaol. The case was remanded for a day to permit of the introduction of further evidence.

Awarding Tenders.

As usual the editor of the Colonist is again befogged in the meaning of words. He accuses THE TIMES of having used "awarding tenders" incorrectly. We are willing to acknowledge that in the hurry of preparing matter for a daily newspaper, wrong expressions are liable to be written. Even the editor of the Colonist will concede this much; but when that journal essays to criticise the correctness of words used it ought to be sure that it is right, then "go a-head." In the use of the words referred to either Webster or the editor of the Colonist is wrong; perhaps it is Webster, who, as an authority, has become absolete, and the editor of our morning contemporary has taken his place. Webster gives the meaning of awarding as "adjudging," "determining," and tenders as "proposals for performing a service." Further comment is unnecessary, as our readers can judge for themselves. The Colonist has placed itself in the same position as it did when discussing the meaning of the words "vindictive" and "vindicative," which was simply to be laughed at.

From the North.

A passenger by the Idaho on her last trip from the north reports salmon as running plentifully and the prospects of an extraordinary catch as quite flattering. The steam scow Mary Leonidas, now building at Loring for the Alaska Steam Navigation company, was launched May 8. She is to run between Loring and the mouth of the Janeau river as a supply-tender to the mining camps. Eight to ten dollar diggings are reported as quite plentiful.

THE TIMES AND ITS FUTURE LINE OF POLICY.

THE TIMES, recognizing the well understood principle that the press is the palladium of our social, religious and political liberty, will use its best efforts to maintain for independent journalism in this province its full share of liberties, as well as that of the people, who sit securely behind its ramparts. The press, beyond question, has its full share of responsibilities. To diminish these, few can have any desire. The power of the press must, like all powers in a moral civilization, submit itself to law, and only through such submission can it be either useful to the commonwealth or lasting. The malicious libeller must suffer the penalties of his offence. More than malicious is the journalist who traduces innocent character and wounds personal feeling for the sake of stimulating the circulation of his paper. But to error arising out of misinformation or misinterpretation of facts, when there is no malicious or mercenary motive, the public will find it necessary to be kind. Early intelligence is demanded; a paper which falls behind is ruined; there is little time for scrutiny, none for cross-examination; whatever is received from an apparently trustworthy source must be published, subject, of course, to subsequent correction, and it is impossible to discriminate between pleasant intelligence and that which may give annoyance in some quarters. Carelessness on the part of journalists in giving publicity to information not true is culpable. Where, however, there is no malice, or mercenary object, mistakes are not proper subjects for punishment, and if they are punished either the press will be gagged or a premium will be given to that sort of journalism which, having no character to lose, is ready to run any risks for gain. A newspaper in good standing, in gathering up, sifting and printing such facts as come within its knowledge has to exercise much care and judgment. That in this respect THE TIMES may have erred we do not deny—to claim to be otherwise would not be human. However, we have been honest and sincere in publishing all such items as to us appeared to be of general interest and of advantage to the public. Like the eminent Burke THE TIMES claims that "something must be pardoned to the spirit of liberty."

And now having entered upon another year the present may be a fitting opportunity for THE TIMES to define the policy and general line of conduct by which it will hereafter be guided.

THE TIMES is not only one of the established institutions of Victoria, but likewise one recognized as belonging to the entire province. It is thoroughly cosmopolitan in its advocacy of such measures as it conceives to be conducive to the best interests of the country, irrespective of sectionalism or partyism. The rights of the poor as well as those of the affluent will always find in THE TIMES a friendly advocate.

In defending the weak against the powerful THE TIMES will, at the same time recognize the fact that there is no individual, or corporation, so strong that his, or their, rights are of such a character as not to require being watched and guarded from harm, believing that between the poor and the rich there exists a community of interests which, in justice to both classes, calls for equal protection.

THE TIMES will advocate the honest and competent administration of provincial affairs; the judicious expenditure of public monies throughout the country without respect to sections. Needed improvements will be insisted upon in all cases, so long as the same may be deemed to be consistent with the resources of the province. Every semblance of chicanery, or double dealing—it matters not from whence the same may emanate—will find in THE TIMES a most persistent and unflinching opponent.

THE TIMES will constantly be found on the side of our own province in all matters of dispute which may arise between the government of this province and the Dominion. While willing to accord to the Federal government everything to which it may be fairly entitled, THE TIMES will carefully watch that no attempt is made by the parent government to entrench on rights which, are justly those of this province. Against such encroachments no uncertain sound will be uttered by this journal.

THE TIMES will support and advocate the advancement of our own race as against the encroachments of the Mongolian. Its efforts at all times will be directed toward so desirable an end as the exclusion of a people which THE TIMES honestly believes to be hostile to the best interest of our common country.

THE columns of THE TIMES in the future, as in the past, will be open for the expression of public opinion, and the discussion of questions that may be of interest to the community at large; even should the views entertained, and the opinions expressed by correspondents, be not in perfect accord with those held by THE TIMES, so long as the language used is of such a character as can with due propriety be presented to its readers.

THE TIMES will always stand sentinel on the watch tower over the actions of the provincial government, ever willing to bestow that meed of praise which worthy and wise legislation or acts, may entitle it to receive, and equally ready to condemn that which may be reprehensible in its management of public affairs.

THE DOMINION CAPITAL.

The Franchise Bill—The Indians who are on the Reserves not to Vote—The Scott Act—Miscellaneous.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

OTTAWA, May 30.

What the end of the Franchise bill will be and when the discussion on it will close no one has any idea as yet, and another week has gone by without the session being apparently any nearer its end. Even some of the Conservative members are beginning to tire of this endless debate upon the question, and express themselves as heartily sick of it. When the bill came up for discussion on Tuesday on the clause stating who shall vote, SIR JOHN MACDONALD moved the adoption of a paragraph regulating the Indian vote. By the amendment he proposed to add to the list of those who shall not vote Indians in Manitoba, Keewatin and the Northwest territories, and Indians on any reserve elsewhere in Canada, who are not in possession and occupation of separate and distinct tracts of land in such reserves, and whose improvements on such separate tracts are not of the value of at least $150. HON. MR. BLAKE said the proposal to give a vote to Indians was still open to the objection which had all-along been urged against it, that the Indians being in a state of nonage could not give an independent vote. He quoted from Indian reports in support of his contention, that many years of education and civilizing efforts would have to be made before the Indian could properly appreciate the franchise. MR. FLEMING said there had been no requests that Indians should have a vote and in face of the fact this feature of the bill should not be pressed. The discussion on this amendment was continued until the adjournment on Tuesday and all day Wednesday, MR. DAVIES moving an amendment to the amendment to exclude Indians in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island from the franchise. SIR JOHN MACDONALD then said he would move to exclude

THE INDIANS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

MR. DAVIES amendment was lost on a vote of 42 yeas to 68 nays. The amendment to exclude British Columbia was carried, and after several other amendments had been voted down, the amendment proposed by SIR JOHN MACDONALD was carried. On Thursday the discussion on the revising barrister clause was commenced. SIR JOHN MACDONALD said that as objection had been taken to the wording of the clause which provides that the revising barrister may be a judge or a barrister of five years' standing, he proposed to change the word "may" to "shall," so as to throw no doubt on the requirement of the clause. For the province of Quebec he proposed to render notaries eligible also for the purpose of revising officers, and stipendiary magistrates in British Columbia. To meet the difficulty occasioned by the boundaries of judicial and of electoral districts, not always being uniform, he proposed to provide that a revising officer may be appointed for a portion of an electoral district as circumstances may require. As he had previously intimated, he would move to amend the clause so as to provide that in all cases where the revising officer is not a judge there shall be an appeal to the courts, as well in fact as in law, and that the taking of an appeal shall not be at the discretion of the revising officer.

HON. MR. BLAKE objected to the revising officer having to make the lists as well. Under the English practice it was recognized that the functions of making and revising were distinct and separate and should be performed by different officers. In the provinces of the Dominion, too, where lists had been prepared the rule had been the preparation of the lists by the local authorities, and this principle was observed in the earlier franchise bills introduced by the premier in the years 1869 and 1870. This practice was followed, because it was believed that the minute local knowledge of a local officer in the preparation of the primary lists and consequently less expense and inconvenience to all concerned. He contended that the bill should be so framed as to require the judge to act as revising officer in all cases where practicable and that where this rule could not be carried out the appointment of the officer should not rest with the executive. No English government, he argued, would dare ask from parliament to be entrusted with the power of appointing the officers who should prepare the voters' list, because it was felt the appointment would be suspected by the people as not being perfectly impartial. If the government wished to to have suspicion cast upon the revising officer, whether judge or barrister, the end could not be attained better than by having them appointed as proposed in the bill. SIR JOHN MACDONALD replied that the same reason might be urged against the appointment of judges themselves, who are generally chosen by the administration of the day on account of their political services, but who, holding office during good behaviour, as he proposed revising officers, should, and not subject to the caprices of political parties, were supposed to at once become impartial. In England the officers were chosen mostly from the ranks of London barristers, who, without any local knowledge, went out through their districts and performed their work satisfactorily. The debate was continued at great length, the opposition speakers opposing the revising barrister feature on the ground of the expense and because they believed the design was to further party ends. The debate on these clauses was continued on Friday. Several amendments being moved and lost, among them being one by MR. DAVIES to leave the preparation of the voters's lists in the hands of the municipal officers, and another providing that where county judges could not act, the chief justices should appoint revisory officers, and also one by MR. CAMERON (Huron) setting forth that the chief justices of each province should appoint the receiving officers, the officers to hold office for one year only. It was expected that the discussion on the revising barrister clauses will be concluded to-night. A large number of petitions, signed by Conservatives, against the Franchise bill, have been presented.

The debate on the third reading of the bill, to amend the Scott Act, was continued at great length in the Senate this week. An amendment making a three-fifths vote necessary to bring the Act into operation, was defeated, but an amendment allowing druggists to make up alcoholic prescriptions was carried. The motion to strike out the clause permitting the sale of beer and, light wine, was defeated. No less than 25,115 signatures to petitions in favor of the clause having been presented in the Commons. The bill was read a third time.

HON. MR. BLAKE has given notice of another large batch of questions respecting the rebellion in the Northwest.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD, in answer to MR. BLAKE, stated that the subject of frauds in connection with the procuration of patents for Dominion lands was under investigation. The government had not received information that its agents in the Northwest had taken fees from settlers in land cases. There had been complaints though that some agents in their capacity of justices of the peace, had taken fees for taking affidavits.

JOSH.

RIEL has been claimed, in turns, by almost every nationality except the Scotch. He is not a Scotch Riel.

RIEL says he was fighting for his "rights." The hangman will see that he gets them.

PETITIONS have been presented from ministers and laymen of the Methodist church in various parts of the country praying that no legislation be passed by the House this year on the Scott Act.

DR. DANIEL WILSON, of the Toronto University, was elected president, and VERY REV. DR. HAMEL, rector of Laval University, Quebec, vice president, of the Royal Society of Canada which met at Ottawa last week.

THE statement which has appeared in some government organs to the effect that MR. BLAKE has engaged a passage on the Allan steamship which sails on the 30th June, and will leave for England on that day, is wholly untrue.

MESSRS. HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. have in preparation for publication at an early day: "The Riverside Parallel Bible," containing the authorized version and the revised version of Old and New Testaments in parallel columns.

AT a recent sale of autographs, in London, thirteen letters by DEAN SWIFT to ALDERMAN BARBER, fetched about $820, and the original manuscript of BURNS' "Tam O'Shanter" and "The Lament of Mary, Queen of Scots," about $760.

THE Hon. Provincial Secretary was to meet the electors of Langley and vicinity to-day, at 1 o'clock. It is understood that the honorable gentleman is making a tour of his district to find out its requirements and in its interests (?) generally!

GEN. GORDON'S diaries will soon be published simultaneously by MESSRS. KEGAN, PAUL & Co., of London, and HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., of Boston. The volume, which is edited by EGMONT HAKE, a cousin of the murdered General, includes letters from GEN. STEWART and the MAHDI, together with other important documents and maps.

SIR DAVID MACPHERSON, Minister of the Interior, sails for England next week for the benefit of his health. In the course of a discussion on Northwest matters in the Senate the other day, SIR DAVID expressed the belief that when the papers were brought down they would implicate others than the half-breeds and Indians in inciting the rebellion.

THE Halifax Herald argues that the Indians cannot have been ill-treated by the government, as about $20 a head has been spent upon them. The organ forgets that $15 out of every $20 voted for the Indians has been pocketed by middlemen, or appropriated and squandered by corrupt officials, and that the remaining $5 calculation must be reduced by three-fourths to be accurate.

BY THE GATE OF THE SEA

A NOVEL.

BY DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY.

This was hardly what the poet had expected to hear, though it was natural that Tregarthen's ward should think well of his preserver.

"He saved your life, I think?"

"He did," said Phil, his cheeks flushing. "I've heard old Reuben Pollarth tell the story many a time. One of the men on board—we were on the Isle of Elba, from Bombay to Liverpool—tied me to a spar and threw me overboard just before the smash came. I can remember crying and begging him not to do it, and fighting before I was tied, but I can't recall anything after that. It was such a night, old Pollarth says, as no living man can remember. I've known the west wind blowing there, and the waves coming in at the Sea-gate, but the old man says that what I've looked at is no more than a boy could make by stirring a puddle with a stick in comparison to what it was that night. I drifted up somehow, with the spar, and Arthur saw me, and went in after me headlong. The next wave threw us up together, and the spar struck him on the head and stunned him; but old Pollarth had time to grip at the spar, and his son took hold of him, and Bill Pollarth took hold of Ben, and the rest all held on, and the wave went back without us. Arthur was a month in bed after it, and was crazy half the time or more."

Marsh felt something of the glow Phil's heart experienced as this tale was told.

The two not merely parted well pleased with each other, but held each other in mind and met frequently, and in a little while became intimates and friends. It was natural that Phil should turn often, in his speech with Marsh, to Tregarthen Island and its owner. And there gradually grew up in the poet's mind the clearest image of the man—a mournful and tender hearted cynic, with a craze.

"His wife ran away from him," said Phil speaking of him one day. "The people on the island and the people at Gorbay always declare that he ill-used her, or was guilty of some dreadful villainy, but I know better. Nobody ever knew Arthur do a mean thing—nobody ever knew him to do a mean thing or a cowardly thing."

When he was alone again Phil's mind was so occupied with his protector that he must needs sit down and write to him instanter. Tregarthan had written, a week or two before: "Your letters are the only murmurs of the world that reach me, and are all I care to reach me." Books, plays, and pictures filled the youngter's head chiefly, and it was mainly of them that he wrote.

"I have made a most fortunate acquaintance," wrote Phil, "in the person of Mr. Ronald Marsh, one of the most distinguised of our modern poets. He is the author of a comedy called 'Gossamer,' now being performed at the Mirror, with which I was enchanted. The chief part is taken by Miss Churchill, who is simply divine. I have seen all the principal actors and actresses now, and there is nobody who comes near Miss Churchill." Then followed criticism: "There is about this admirable artist a grace and refinement which other actresses lack. You are sure at first sight that she is a gentlewoman. Perhaps her rarest charm is her voice, which is marvelously sweet, and has an underlying note of melancholy even in its most joyeus passages. Not that it invests her comedy with a tinge of the maudlin, or that she plays a gay scene in any but the brightest manner; but her voice softens the asperities of raillery, and seems to assure you of a tender heart."

There was a good deal more of this, and Tregarthen read it with strange feelings. The heart has wounds sometimes which will not close until death applies his infallible heal-all. Tregarthen's heart was thus wounded. Scorn is a poor plaster for such a sore as he carried, but he knew of no other, or cared to apply no others. Forgetfulness was out of his reach.

When he read this letter of Phil's his first impulse was to sit down and warn the lad of women at large; but a little reflection told him what a hopeless task that was—how little likely to be prosperous in any case—how very unlikely to be prosperous in the case of a vivid and impetuous lad like Phil, who was born to fall in love, as the sparks fly upward. He went back to his books and his crucibles and his mad experiments, and left the youngster unanswered altogether for the time. When in a week or two another letter came, he expected to find something more of Miss Churchill, and he did not know whether relief or disappointment were the greater when he found no mention of her. Phil's homeward letters touched Miss Churchill no more, and there were reasons for this which would have disturbed Tregarthen had he known them.

When Ronald Marsh and his young friend talked of Tregarthen, the poet had occasionally to listen to second-hand diatribes against women, of whom his young friend knew, perhaps, as little as could well be known. These, being inspired by Tregarthen, naturally reflected on Tregarthen's wife; but for a time Marsh was perforce contented to dispute them on general grounds, and to instruct Phil that no man was ever truly good who could so libel one-half of humanity. He told Phil that a chivalrous attitude toward women was essential to any male human creature who desired to be a man, and much more to the same effect.

Now, the young man was beginning to discover that he was by no means a misogynist, but he would answer, "Truth before sentiment. I know one truly good man—the best man in the world—so far—the kindest-hearted, the purest-minded, and most honorable—and he thinks extremely ill of women. Perhaps he generalizes too much from one particular case" (the young fellow had wonderfully philosophical airs at this time, and talked with the gravity of a grandfather); "but, if he does, the one case was probably bad enough to justify him."

"Perhaps so," said the poet. "By-the-way, Phil, did you ever meet Miss Churchill?"

"No," said Phil.

"Should you like to meet her?"

"Like to meet her!" said Phil. "I'd go from here to the Mirror on my hands and knees to meet her."

"That is not at all necessary," said Marsh, smiling; "we can take a cab. Be here at twelve o'clock to-morrow, and we will drive down to the theater together."

Phil went away 'uplifted at the prospect, and sat far into the night shaving at the sonnet beginning—

"To what dim glade with airy voices filled
Of joy and sorrow hast thou charmed my soul!"

This production was addressed to Miss Churchill, as Beriha, in "Gossamer," and the young versifier knelt at the shrine of Miss Churchill's perfections in such sonnets as only a young versifier knows. The quality of the verse produced has little to do with the warmth of sentiment experienced. Young men and young women write woful nonsense some times over which they thrill and weep and hoax as though they were so many Appollos and Sapphos; and the fact that Phil really was a poet made him no warmer than he would have felt if he had been altogether hollow-headed. The difference is, that the poet gets his thrills and tears upon the paper, while, with the other sort, all stops at the finger-tips and will dribble not a hair's breadth further.

Of course he had had a thousand temptations to expose his verses, or some of them, to a real and approved poet, when he found himself admitted to intimacy with one; but he had always blushed at them, as the pretty Jane blushes when she hears in her day-dream the words of courtship which are not yet spoken. But now he so loved and innocently worshiped his own fancies, as set forth in this particular sonnet, that the temptation assailed him with irresistible force; and when he called upon Marsh, as arranged, he produced the manuscript, with much confusion, and asked him to read it.

"Would you mind reading this, Mr. Marsh," he said, blushingly. "There are only fourteen lines, and it can't bore you long. It may be dreadful rubbish—"

"Let me see," returned the poet. He read the verses with a grave face. "Shall I print this for you?" he asked. "We pay a guinea a page for verse, and a sonnet can stand by itself."

These are commercial days when even poets go into business, and Marsh, as Phil knew, was proprietor of a magazine. The author of the sonnet was overwhelmed.

"If you think it worth printing," he said, with becoming diffidence.

"Yes," said Marsh, "I think it very well worth printing—very well worth it indeed. And now," locking the sonnet in his desk, "if you are ready, we will start. Smith reads his new play to-day, and I have promised to be there. He was my Collaborateur for two or three years, and is one of the finest fellows living. you must know him, Phil."

Altogether, heaven seemed opening on Master Phil this morning. William John Smith, author of the slaky and buried "Demogorgon," was in the green room, with his roll of manuscript, when the poet and his companion reached the theater, and Miss Churchill arrived a little later. Lorrimer was there also—a trifle obese by this time, and more rubicund than ever. The Mirror had a star company, and Phil saw near at hand several celebrities whom he had hitherto only beheld upon the stage. To be near these celebrated people when they word the garments of every-day life, and to hear them talk without book, was a treat to the novice. The play was read and applauded. Then the players drew for the most part in a knot around William John Smith, and asked about his ideas for this stroke of business and that stroke of business, for the said Smith had grown mighty, and it was profitable—or might be—to be interested in his work, and to give him a favorable impression about one's art enthusiasms.

It was noticeable to Philthat the poet, for some reason as yet unknown, was gradually becoming less and less at his ease while the reading of the play went on, and this somewhat dashed his own interest in the business. Now for a time Marsh deserted Phil altogether, and left him standing in a corner companionless, while he crossed the room and addressed Miss Churchill.

"Will you give me a word?" asked the poet.

"Certainly."

"I have done a clumsy thing, and I have only just begun to see it. A young worshipper of yours, a poet, and a fine-hearted a lad as I have met anywhere, wants to know you, and I have brought him here."

"I noticed him," she answered. "He has an honest face. Why should you apologize? I am always pleased to know your friends. You have the secret of knowing none but good people."

"Your own goodness," he said, in return, "brightens everything you shine on. Forgive me, but I am so old a courtier that I can dare to speak the truth now and then. But I am afraid I may pain you, and yet I feared you might blame me if you knew, and if I did not bring him. I cannot tell whether I am acting well or ill, wisely or in my common way."

"This preamble has a meaning!" she said.

"A serious one," said the poet, uneasily. "The young gentleman is a Mr. Maurice—Mr. Philip Maurice, of—Tregarthen."

"The child," she whispered, looking with a white face, at the poet, "who was saved from the wreck?"

"The same," Marsh answered. "If I have done wrong—

"You have not done wrong. Excuse me for a moment. Let him stay till I return."

She moved with a somewhat stately carriage from the greenroom, though her knees shook beneath her, and her heart beat wildly. When she reached the luxuriously furnished little chamber private to herself her trembling knees relaxed altogether, and she almost fell into the armchair beside the fireplace.

"Does he know who I am?" she asked herself, thinking of Phil. "Does he know what Arthur thinks of me?" A thousand tumultuous questions were in her mind, a thousand tumultuous feelings ran riot in her heart. How great a sinner she had been, sinning every day against his expressed wishes, and earning a hateful fame and adulation by it! She had wrecked the noblest of lives, broken or darkened the manliest heart. For the millionth time she wondered why she had not stayed to brave the storm, to make her confession and be forgiven, and to serve his like a slave with a life-long devotion. And even in her self-accusing soul some faint voice of necessary egotism sounded. Would she have been so unworthy of him after all if he had taken her back and forgiven her? Would she not have loved him so, with such an unfailing worship and such a willing surrender of her soul, that he must have loved her back again? She suffered greatly while she sat thus, and even wept a little; but, calming herself by-and-by, and removing all traces of her tears, she returned to the greenroom with seeming tranquility.

There were not more than half a dozen people left there, but among them were Phil and the poet. She moved toward them, and Marsh performed the office of introduction.

"I am pleased to meet you, Mr. Maurice," she said in the beautiful tones which had so moved him when he heard them from the stage. He bowed in answer, but was tongue-tied for the moment, as if he had been in the presence of some gentle divinity. "I am alone at home this afternoon, Mr. Marsh," she added, "and I shall be glad if you and Mr. Maurice will take a cup of tea with me. Lina, is there, of course," she added, with a faint smile; "but sisters are not always the best of company to each other."

"You libel Lina and yourself," said the poet, with a pretense of gayety.

"In half an hour," she said, turning toward the door. "May I expect you?"

Her carriage waited at the stage entrance to the theater, and she drove away, with another faint smileand a nod of the head to Phil. He and the poet followed her on foot, and, reaching the house, were shown into a little jewel of a room, where everything was wonderfully neat and rich and dainty. By-and-by the actress reappeared, in in-door costume; tea was brought, and the three settled down to talk. The hostess, with her face turned from the light, nestled into a luxurious chair, and spoke from a twilight in which her features were scarcely to be discerned.

"You know Tregarthen Island, Mr. Maurice?"

"Oh, yes," said Phil, a good deal surprised at the question. "I have spent more than half my life there."

"I am a Cornish woman," she said. "I was born at Gorbay. But I have not seen it for a long time. Is it much changed? Tell me about the island. Are the Pollarths living?"

"Jan is dead," said Phil. "Did you know Jan—the patriarch of the tribe?"

"Poor Jan!" she said, with a tremor in her voice. Marsh sat ill at ease, fearing she would break down. "But the rest are all living: Reuben and his children, and—"

"All of them," Phil answered. "Jan's is the only death that has taken place on the Island for more than twelve years."

"And the Castle," she asked—"are the repairs finished?"

THE TIMES' Office has been removed to Mr. Langley's building, Yates street, second door from Mr. Frank Campbell's corner, the premises formerly occupied by the British Columbia Express Company, which have been fitted up specially to meet the requirements of the rapid increase in the business of THE TIMES Printing and Publishing Company.

CITY AND PROVINCE.

—City council meeting to-night.

—Linen bandages will be acceptable at the Royal Hospital.

—Messrs. Van Volkenburg Brothers received fifty-three hogs per Olympian to-day.

—A consignment of 150 cases of Victoria salmon were shipped to Toronto on Monday.

—Tenders wanted for building on Yates street. Plans and specifications can be seen at the office of R. T. Williams, Broad street.

—The first kiln of brick, manufactured at Kempster's yard, is now being burned. The yard is situated on the east bank of the arm, near Craigflower bridge.

—The Victoria Standard of this morning calls Mr. Blake "a political impostor and hypocrite." This is almost on a par with the Colonist's criticisms of Mr. Gladstone.

—Contractors are reminded that the tenders for the reconstruction of the coal sheds and jetty on Thetis Island, at Esquimalt, are due at the naval yard to-morrow by noon.

—Two Idaho base ball clubs scored 259 and 198 runs in a game last week. The largest number of runs in a single inning was 68. This beats the Reds and Athletics best records all hollow.

—The Olympian brought freight to G G Prior, Van Volkenburg Brothers, Briggs, A Opper, A Lewis & Co, Carne & Munsie, T Dubbe, T Earle, Welch R & Co.

—Mr. C. B. Willey, before returning to Victoria, gave new sureties, Messrs. A. J. Baker and L. F. Thompson, while the old bond still remains. He proposes to pay every dollar he owes in Victoria.

—In the matter of the charge against hackmen for permitting their horses to remain on Wharf street unattended, the magistrate has further adjourned judgment on the validity of the by-law until Monday next.

—At a meeting of the Zeran Silver Mining Company, held at Shuswap lake, the following directors were elected: R Bailey, President, N P Watson, H Tappan, J E Pompore, H A Berry, W B Bailey. A contract for a fifty foot tunnel has been let.

—A young gentleman who has just arrived from Quebec, named J. W. D'Amours, was out with the boys, and when in one of our city saloons, was "gone through" by a few sharpers. Fortunately his loss does not amount to more than $30 or $40.

Arrival of the Boscowitz.

The steamer Barbara Boscowitz, Capt. S. Williams, arrived at noon to-day from the Northwest coast, having the following passengers on board: Rev E Woods, Mrs E Woods, Rev H F Smyth, J Gray, R Cunningham, J Abernethy, Geo Seymour, James McLaughlin, William May, William Brotchie, 25 Indians and 17 Chinamen (who were not allowed to enter Lorne creek.) She had also on board 13 tons of salt colachans and 21 tons of potatoes for Henry Saunders, and 22 thousand feet of lumber and about five tons of furs and skins.

The miners on Lorne creek are busy fluming and putting in wing dams. They expect to be taking out gold this week, as the water is fast falling.

The Hill claim, "Young America" Co. washed a piece of ground, 12x5 feet and got $700 out of it; one nugget of this sum is valued at $104, and believed to be the largest found on that stream. Mr. Huson's son, George, is one of the fortunate members of this company.

A petition was presented to Mr. W. H. Dempster at Aberdeen, asking him to undertake the position of postmaster at that place. It was signed by one hundred and one miners and others. Another petition has also been sent to the postmaster-general, signed by a number of miners and others, asking that Mr. W. H. Dempster be appointed postmaster at Aberdeen, Skeena river.

Robbery on the Anderson.

The steamer Eliza Anderson was robbed last night about eleven o'clock of a considerable quantity of cutlery. The loss was almost immediately detected and special officer Farrell and several policemen were at once notified. Harry Brown, one of the suspected thieves, was arrested and locked up. From information received, officer Walker searched under the sidewalk on Store street, near the corner of Johnson, and found most of the missing knives and forks hidden there. They were taken to the Anderson and identified. A gang of four suspicious looking characters, of whom Brown was one, was loafing around the wharf about the time of the theft. It is to be hoped the guilty parties will be caught and punished, for the man who would steal from Capt. Tom Wright must be about the quintessence of meanness.

Establishing the Longitude.

In yesterday's issue of the TIME TIMES, in describing the manner of determining the longitude of Victoria, we referred to Mr. Drummond now in this city, as being an assistant of Mr. Klotz. In this we have been misinformed. Mr. Drummond has not for many years held the position of an assistant, in conducting any scientific operations. His present position is that of astronomer in charge of one of the several stations being established in this province. After having, in conjunction with Mr. Klotz, now in Seattle, determined Victoria's longitude, he will go to Kamloops at which another observatory will be established by him.

Our American Cousins.

Senator Sherman, and the other prominent American gentlemen who arrived by the Starr yesterday, to the number of about twenty, partook of one of the noted dinners at the Driard last evening. Messrs. Reden & Hartnagel, with the assistance of their famous chef, outdid all their former deeds and sustained the unrivalled reputation of their far-famed hotel. The party afterwards boarded the Starr, which left this morning at an early hour on the return trip.

RUSSELL VS. RUSSELL.

Scandalous Developments—Unfit for Publication.

The case of Russell vs. Russell for divorce was heard to-day in the Supreme Court, His Lordship Judge Gray, presiding.

The following were selected as jurymen: C. F. Beaven, Wm. Allen, James Andrews, George Good, Jos. Rowe, John Partridge, F. Carne, Jr., R. Jeffrey.

Mr. Mills moved that the jury be composed of twelve persons, as he claimed that the law required that number. Mr. Drake opposed. The court decided to make a note of the point raised.

Mr. Drake in opening the case said the parties were married on the 30th of Jan., 1882, and there were two children. On the 8th of Jan. last the plaintiff discovered that his wife had been guilty of adultery with one A. Haynes, called the co-respondent. The plaintiff was a hack-driver and was absent from the house for the day. Albert Haynes was a baker's assistant and was in the habit of coming to the house about 2 o'clock, and used to remain until about the time when the plaintiff would return home. In December the plaintiff engaged a girl to take care of the children and she had been a witness of indecent familiarities. Several witnesses would be called to prove that adultery had taken place. The defence, he understood, would be a denial of the charge; and also an allegation would be made against the plaintiff of cruelty to his wife, the respondent in the case.

Ed. S. Garnet, sworn, deposed—I remember the marriage of the parties; they were married at the church on the hill.

To Mr. Mills—I drove a cab; I drove to the gate on Fort street; the lady came down and got into the cab.

Edith M. Compson, sworn—Was engaged by Mrs. Russell on the 30th of Dec., 1884; was to take care of the children and assist in house work; know Albert Haynes; saw him at Russell's house every day but one. He came about 3 o'clock and remained until 5:30 or 6. Mr. Russell generally returned home about 6 o'clock and went and put his horses out first; Haynes usually came into the kitchen; He generally said "Hello" or "How'd ye do," sometimes he and Mrs. Russell remained in the kitchen, sometimes in the parlor, but in the bedroom generally; I sometimes went into the bedroom to see the clock; I saw them lying on the bed three times; the last time I saw them was on the 8th of Jan., 1885; before he came she told me that he had solicited her indecently and she was going to consent; when he came out of the room her dress was disarranged. I told plaintiff what I had seen after she left the house; saw the parties hug and kiss each other several times. Afterwards Mrs. Russell asked me if I had told the plaintiff anything about them. I told her "I had told the truth." She said I had driven her straight to Broad street.

To Mr. Mills—The 8th of January was Thursday; I was in the service of Mr. Hunter; did not care about staying there; they complained about my conduct; they told me to stay in the house but I did not. I got out of the window one night and stayed till morning. I stayed at Mrs. McDonald; did not tell Mrs Russell I went to a hotel one night; did not tell her that I allowed a man to sleep with me; I told her I stopped at the Grand Pacific; I knew Fred Weldon; did not go about much with him; went to his saloon to chang some money. Hunter discharged me because I stayed out at night; Russell had been very kind and polite to me; I considered him a gentleman; I was at his house from the 30th December to the 11th January, before Mrs. Russell left, he asked me to come here; do not know how many times we have spoken about my evidence; do not know how many times I stopped out from Hunter's without permission; I went down on board the Geo. E. Starr; went to see Mr. Leighton; am engaged to him.

F. Leighton, sworn—Sometimes went to Russell's house to see the last witness; nightwatchman on board the George E. Starr. Saw Haynes there; saw him and Mrs. Russell kiss each other.

To Mr. Mills—Was never in prison; did not tell Mrs. Russell that I had killed a man with an axe, and that I had been put in prison for it. Never tried to kiss Mrs. Russell. She did not try to slap my face.

Mrs. E. Hamilton, sworn, deposed—I live on North Park street; have known the respondent since she was married; have nursed her; have seen Albert Haynes in their home generally; saw her kiss him at one time. I remonstrated with her; she said Russell knew it and he did not care. I heard Mrs. Russell say she wanted a divorce, and she was going through with it. Mr. Russell was kind to her; she was not kind to her children. Saw Haynes sitting on Mrs. Russell's knee; she was not ashaming as a married woman should.

To Mr. Mills—I was present when this was going on; it was done in my presence; I did not interfere as I did not wish to make trouble; she seemed to be inclined to have more to do with the young man than she ought. I advised her to be more careful, but she took no notice. I never heard Russell curse and swear in the house. The respondent told me that she had to leave the house once, but it was her own fault.

Thomas Harding, sworn, deposed—Am a baker; Albert Haynes is in my employ; Mrs. Russell came to my shop a number of times; I prevented her coming to the shop; Haynes has not delivered bread since last September. He is supposed to sleep in the shop.

Justine McDonald, sworn, deposed—Am a dressmaker; went to Mrs Russell's house on the 3rd of January. Saw Haynes there. He and Mrs. Russell were in the bedroom and the door was open. I went to see Mrs. Russell at the Commercial hotel. Haynes was there frequently; I saw them kissing each other. A laughy discussion then arose as to the admission of this evidence. They were in a bed-room; I knocked at the door; my sister opened the door; I was in the bed-room with them at Russell's house; Mrs. Russell threatened to drown herself if I told; When I went into the room at the Commercial the lamp was turned down and they were in the bed; my sister was in the room.

To Mr. Mills—Was good friends with Mrs. Russell until about three weeks ago; spoke to her once since; heard of Russell coming to our house about three weeks ago with some presents for mother; Russell has been at our house about four or five times; never heard my mother say she was going to make it pretty hot for Mrs. Russell; she had some jewelry of Mrs. Russells; do not think she refused to give it up.

The Court then adjourned for one hour.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Anna McDonald, sworn, deposed—I first knew Mr. and Mrs. Russell in Jan.; my sister was making a dress for the servant girl; I was at the house several times; saw Haynes there about four times; went walking with Mrs. Russell while she was stopping at the hotel; she told me she liked Albert Haynes; we went around by Haynes' house looking for Albert; Mrs. Russell said she would not go without him. He saw us and went with us; we went out to a Chinaman's at Foul Bay; they were hugging and kissing; Haynes had Mrs. Russell on his knee at one time. Mrs. Russell told me that she and Haynes went down to a haystack and some one threw hay in her face; one time, at Russell's house, they went into a bed-room and sent myself and a little girl out of the room; it was about 5 o'clock; saw Haynes in her room at the Commercial Hotel. Was in the room with them at the hotel. They were sitting on the bed and the lamp was turned down; my sister came in and took me away; they were then in bed; she would not let me tell my mother as she said she would drown herself; I told her "to make a clean job of it, and go over the second bridge to do it." She said she would marry Haynes after this case was over.

To Mr. Mills—The story I was reading when they turned the lamp down was about a girl that had run away; I was sitting near the bed; could see the bed; when Haynes came in I gave him my chair and I sat on the coal box; he took off his coat and said it was very warm; saw them take down the covers but thought it would not be nice to look at them; we were good friends until a short time ago; Russell has been to our house lately, he brought eggs and some other things; he has been a very good friend with my mother for the past month or so.

Mrs. McDonald, sworn—First knew Mrs. John J. Russell after she had left her husband, her children and her home for Albert Haynes. I went to see Mr. Russell as she was threatening to take her life. He said the matter was in the lawyer's hands, but if I kept her he would pay me. Haynes did not come up to the house during that time. When she was visiting to merly Haynes came up to see her four times. I spoke to Haynes and told him it was damaging to him to have the summonses issued. He smiled and said Russell had plenty of money and he intended to have some of it. She acknowledged to me that she had been guilty repeatedly, and would be again. She told this in my own house.

The case is in progress as we go to press.
